SUMMARY REPORT

ADC-2007:ENDO MICROSCOPE AND ITS APPLICATIONS

Dentistry is the field of medicine which is restricted to narrow workarea owing to its micro anatomical structures. Extended working period can hamper the ergonomics. The application of magnification devices in endodontics is mainly meant for visual enhancement and improved ergonomics. The present state of magnification devices, their applications within the endodontic practice, factors that influence their usage, the advantages, and shortcomings, as well as the significances of magnification in the field of endodontics should be discussed for its proper applications. Prof. Dr Iffat Nasim, MDS, Ph.D, Head of the Department (Academics) has graduated from Al Ameen Dental College, Bijapur, Karnataka, Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences, Bangalore in September 2003. She completed her post-graduation from Saveetha Dental College, Saveetha University, Chennai in June 2009. She is currently pursuing PhD programme in Endodontics from Saveetha University. She has guided various research projects for both undergraduates and postgraduates. She has published numerous papers in journals with high-impact factors. She had presented original research papers in both the International and National Forum. She is a member of the Academic Council of Saveetha University. The programme aimed at students to learn the newer advancements in the field of dentistry and its impact on future outcomes, to understand the effect of extended working patterns on ergonomics, to understand the application of magnification devices in the field of dentistry and to understand the advantages provided by magnification devices in improving the ergonomics especially in fields like endodontics.

PARFOCALISATION

- A. Position the microscope above a flat, stationary surface.
- B. Using a pen or pencil, make a dot on a piece of white paper to serve as a focus target and place it within the illumination field of the microscope.
- C. Set both of the eyepiece diopter settings to "0".
- D. Set the microscope on its highest magnification setting and focus using the fine-focus control until a sharp image is obtained.
- E. Be careful not to physically shift the microscope position, change the magnification setting to its lowest position. Focus left and right eyepieces, one at a time, by turning the diopter ring until the image is clear and sharp.
