SUMMARY REPORT OF THE EVENT
ADC-2008: BIOSCIENCES FOR ORAL HEALTH

The goal of the healthcare system has evolved over time, shifting from a narrow focus that targeted individual disease prevention to a more comprehensive guide on human well-being. In the past, health studies focused more on human mortality and morbidity. Nevertheless, the trend has changed over the years to focus on the impact of disease or impairment on how people proceed, behaves, and perceives life quality. Research on the importance of the oral cavity influence on overall well-being of the individual is prime importance. This impacts the overall quality of life. Hence, in recent years there has been an extensive study towards the microbiology of oral cavity. The physiologic process of oral cavity has to be in harmony with total body. This course aims at educating the students about the influence of oral cavity on overall well-being. The same can be applied by the student in their clinical practice.
