SUMMARY REPORT

ADC-2103:SOFT TISSUE COVERAGE IN PERIODONTICS

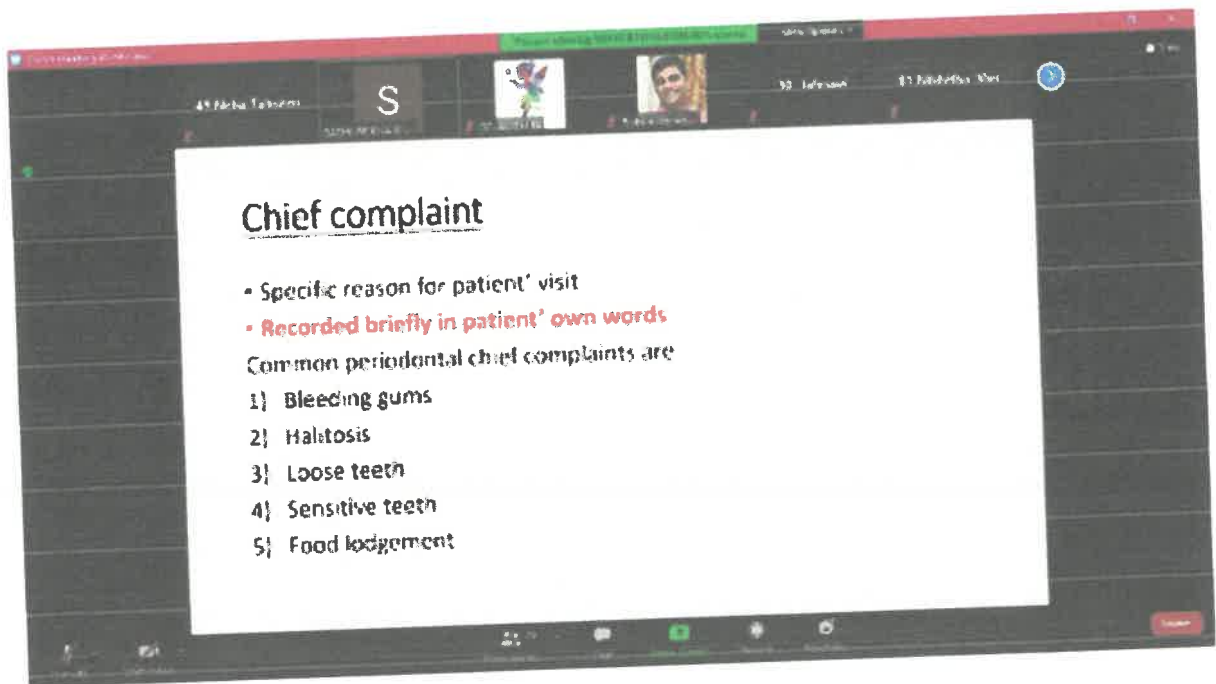

The purpose of this session is to manage the periodontal defects with a primary outcome goal of complete root coverage. Root coverage can be managed through different procedures and the outcomes are measured by reduced defect, increase in clinical attachment levels, and an increase in amount of keratinized tissue. The different procedures in soft tissue coverage include: 1) sub epithelial connective tissue graft; 2) coronally advanced flap; 3) free gingival graft; and 4) soft tissue graft substitutes. The choice of the technique depends on clinician's surgical goals and the patient's understanding of the anticipated outcome. Based on the literature evidence and documented cases, root coverage can be predictably achieved and a successful clinical outcome can be maintained long term. : Dr.Tanuja post graduated from Annamalai University having 18 years experience & post graduate guide since 8 years. She is life member of ISP.She is having no.of publications both in national & international pubmed journals. She is specified in Oral Implantology soft tissue grafting &osseous regenerative procedures.The student is expected to learn about the anatomy, physiology and biology of soft tissues of oral cavity. The aging process involved and their resulting changes. To apply the periodontal subject knowledge in treatment of theses defects.
