SUMMARY REPORT

ADC 2105: DEVELOPMENTAL DEFECTS OF ORAL CAVITY

The developmental anomalies of oral cavity are malformations affecting dental and oral tissues. Anomalies of teeth can be associated with primary, mixed or adult dentitions. Anomalies are the results of perturbations in the developmental stages of tissues which may be influenced by genetic and/or environmental factors. The most common developmental anomalies are tongue-tie, fluorosis and high frenal attachment. Such variation may be due to genetic and environmental causes. Future research is required to correlate the developmental anomalies with dental and/or oral diseases. Resource person: Dr.N. Govindraj Kumar, Vice principal professor and HOD ,Department of Oral pathology,GSL Dental College, Rajamahendravaram. Student is expected to learn management of unusual oral conditions. Should be able to identify the variations in oral cavity and treat them accordingly towards root canal anomalies treatment and should enhance the clinical skill for the above situations.
